57 FORT STREET, LOVE BUILDING.

Fresh from the docks, resplendent in new paint and interior furnishings, the United States naval collier Justin arrived in port yesterday, en route to Manila via Guam. For nearly a year the Justin has been lying at Mare Island out of commission.

Captain William K. Scott is in command of the trim little vessel which registers 1414 tons net. Although one of the slowest vessels attached to the Navy Department, she is considered one of the staunchest, and has a record of service which even many of the battleships now on commission would be proud to possess.

When the Spanish war broke out and the combined fleets of Admirals Sampson and Schley were sent to Cuban waters, the Justin was purchased, and during the entire period of the blockade freighted fuel for the fleet. First she carried coal to the blockading fleet facing the Havana coast. Next she was sent around to join the fleet which guarded the entrance to Santiago harbor and was one of the fleet of "mosquito" vessels which gave to the warships the snews of modern warfare—coal.

When the Oregon and Iowa steamed around Cape Horn into the Pacific the Justin was sent with them, and came to San Francisco when the Iowa broke down.

She is a slow boat. Her machinery is not powerful and able to drive her at the rate of seven knots an hour—her maximum speed. She left Frisco on her present trip on October 1, and therefore made this port in fourteen days. She carries 3,500 tons of special coal for the naval fleet at Guam and Manila. The coal comes from Castle Gate, Utah, reckoned by authorities the finest for use on warships. It cost about $10 a ton delivered on board the Justin.

The coal is stowed away in an all steel enclosure. The hull, bulwarks and decks are of steel, no wood being used in their construction. On the deck are tubes in which are lowered thermometers twice a day to determine whether there is any likelihood of a fire breaking out in the coal. There are flush tubes which lead directly from the pumps into the hold and in a few moments it can be flooded, and afterwards as easily pumped out.

An upper deck has been added during the vessel's stay at Mare Island. This gives additional room for the ship's officers, together with chart rooms. Directly below are the rooms of the engineers, and bathrooms for the officers. In these are porcelain lined tubs. They are entirely closed in with steel walls, and Hammam baths can be taken by means of steam pipes which lead into the rooms.

The petty officers have commodious quarters near the forward hatch. The crew's quarters in the bow are well adapted for their comfort. On the after deck is a 6-pounder quick firing gun, bought from Great Britain at the outbreak of the Spanish war. The officer's rooms are models of neatness. Handsome wardrobes, with berths built of a pretty light colored wood show that the Justin has been fitted up under the careful supervision of the Navy Department, and every detail is spick and span after the manner usually prescribed by the Navy Department. Electric lights and fans are furnished for every portion of the vessel.

The officers and crew of the Justin are civilians. As the bill providing that vessels of the Justin class shall be governed by naval officers has not been passed, she will carry a civilian crew until Congress passes the bill.

The collier's officers are: Commander, Wm. K. Scott; first officer, Samuel Hughes; second officer, Howard Rees; third officer, N. G. Robinson; chief engineer, Thomas Nielson; first assistant, Herman Neilson; second assistant, F. J. Walsh; third assistant, L. B. Zolezi.

Just below the bridge is the ship's bell. It is one of the historic bells of Uncle Sam's navy, and was cast in 1859. It was first put aboard the U. S. S. "Dacotah," of the Omaha class, and bears the following legend:

"U. S. S. Ny."

"U. S. S. Dacotah."

It has therefore already been through two wars—the Civil and the Spanish. As a special compliment to a vessel of her class the Navy Department took the bell from its collection of historic souvenirs and sent it into active service again when the fleets went into Cuban waters.

Lying alongside the Pacific Mail wharf the Justin's bulwark rail was even with the dock stringer. She leaves this afternoon for Guam, after taking on a big supply of coal.

C. J. LYONS, Meteorologist Government Survey. N. B.—Observers are requested to forward their reports promptly at the end of each month, that they may appear in the published report on the 15th of the following month.

CAME NEAR DYING.

"For three days and nights I suffered as my untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., wholesale agents.

Rev. J. H. Teale, having held Baptist pastorates in British Columbia and Oregon, is now secretary and organizer of the New York State Anti-Saloon League for the district of Greater New York. Rev. J. Q. A. Henry is the State superintendent.

Describing the disorders in the vicinity of Canton, the Hongkong correspondent of the Times says: The American church in the suburbs of Canton has been destroyed, and the Catholic church at To Kam Hang and the foreign cemetery there have been desecrated.

"To See or Not to See"

That is the Question.

There's no reason why you should not see if your glasses are right—the kind we sell.

It is part of our business to attend to those useful members—

YOUR EYES

And that we are meeting with marked success is evidenced by the daily increase of our optical business.

We Hate Bragging.

But beg to remind you that nothing in the way of correcting eye trouble or grinding every kind of a lense for every kind of eye trouble, is beyond our skill.

MR. N. A. CHAPMAN, an expert optician just from the Coast has charge of this department, and all orders entrusted to him will be carefully filled and attended to.
